

Project Structure

First item to be completed is the basic project structure that includes all the code infrastructure we will need. There should be no Tubi TV specific parts in this work, at this point we should be able to open source the entire project as a starter-kit.

Some of the items to be completed:

1. Makefile (exists)
2. Generic code to make and manage a queue of async http calls (exists but may need refactoring)
3. Generic code to interact with API
4. Generic code to run simple unit tests (exists but may need simple refactoring)
5. Utilities toolbelt that are deemed useful, e.g. function to create a URL from a URI and GET parameters (some exist already, others may be needed)

Main Grid

The main grid is where users can browse for movies. The categories list is on the left and users can view movies on the right. There are two API calls, one to get a list of categories and another that will fetch all the details necessary to display a specific category. In addition to the categories returned by the main API, some ad-hoc special categories need to be injected (e.g. Recently Viewed, Bookmark and Search & Login).

The following screens are similar to the PDF I sent you.

Main Grid - Posters

This is the screen that most categories will look like

Main Grid - Featured

The featured category has a slightly different rendering, uses wider images and more rows

Movie Show Details Page (with & without hero)

The screen that a user sees when they click on an a movie. Sometimes we have a hero image we want to put in the background and sometimes we don't, in which case we have a generic rendering. Clicking on subtitles brings up an overlay

Series Show Details Page (with & without hero)

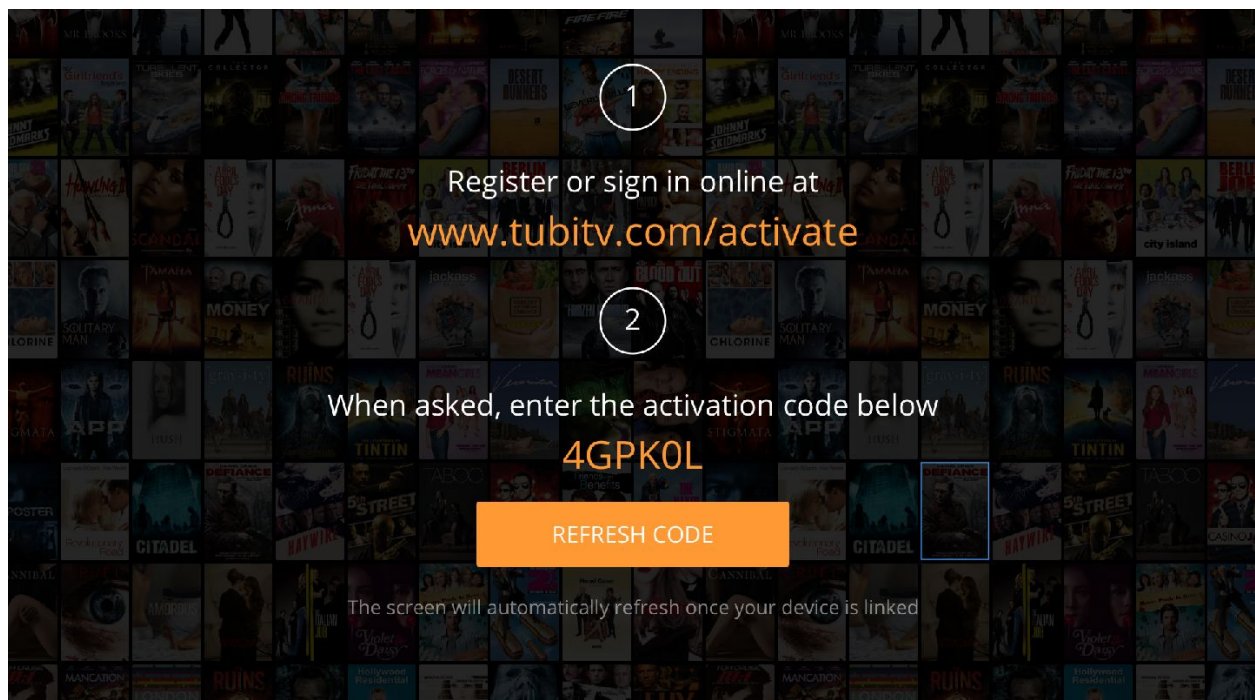

Very similar to the movie one, but it has a link to view all episodes

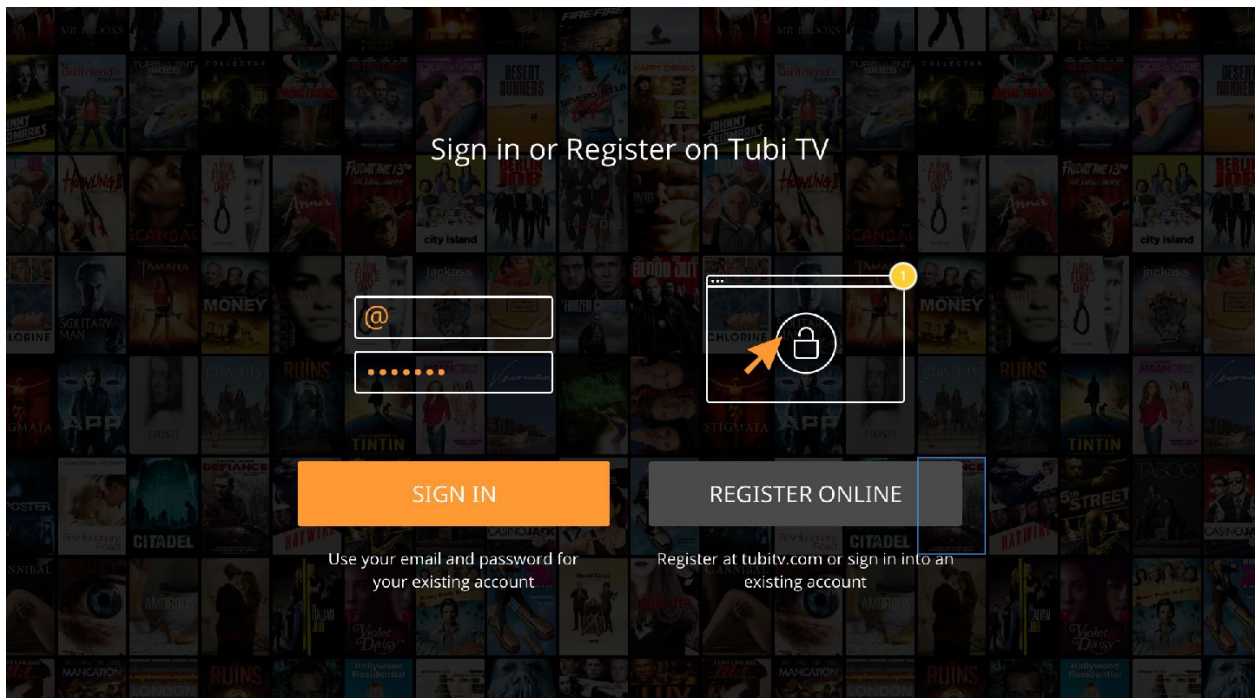

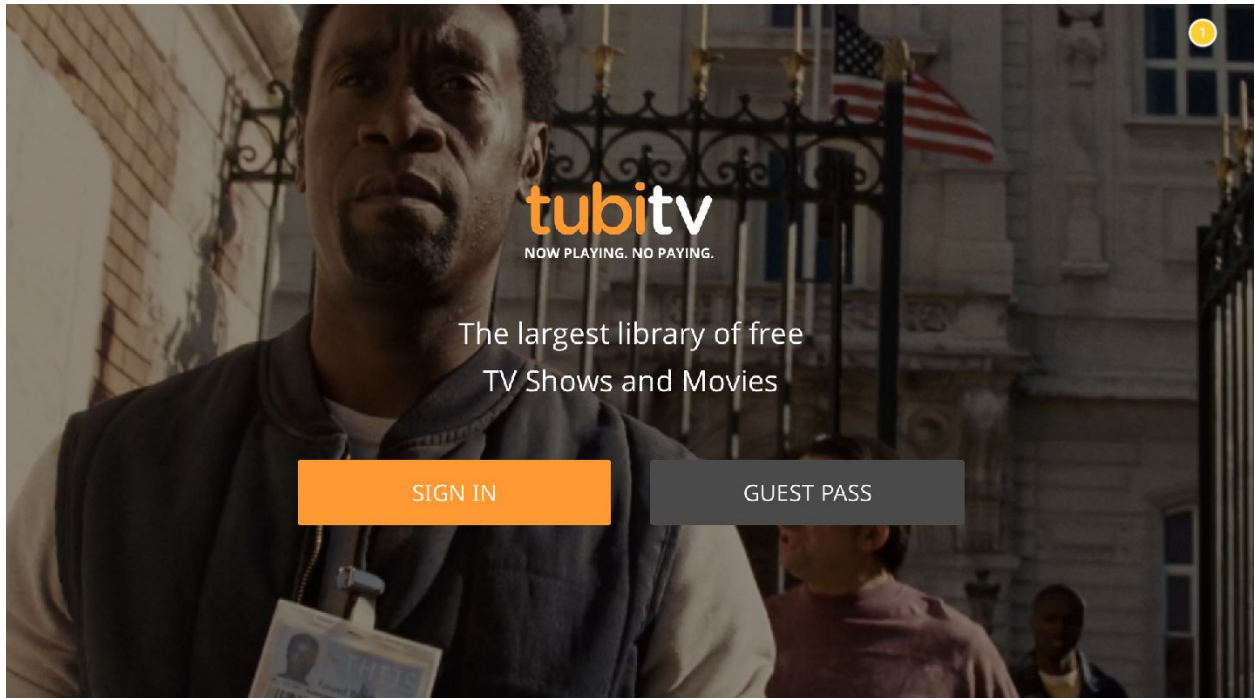

Episodes List

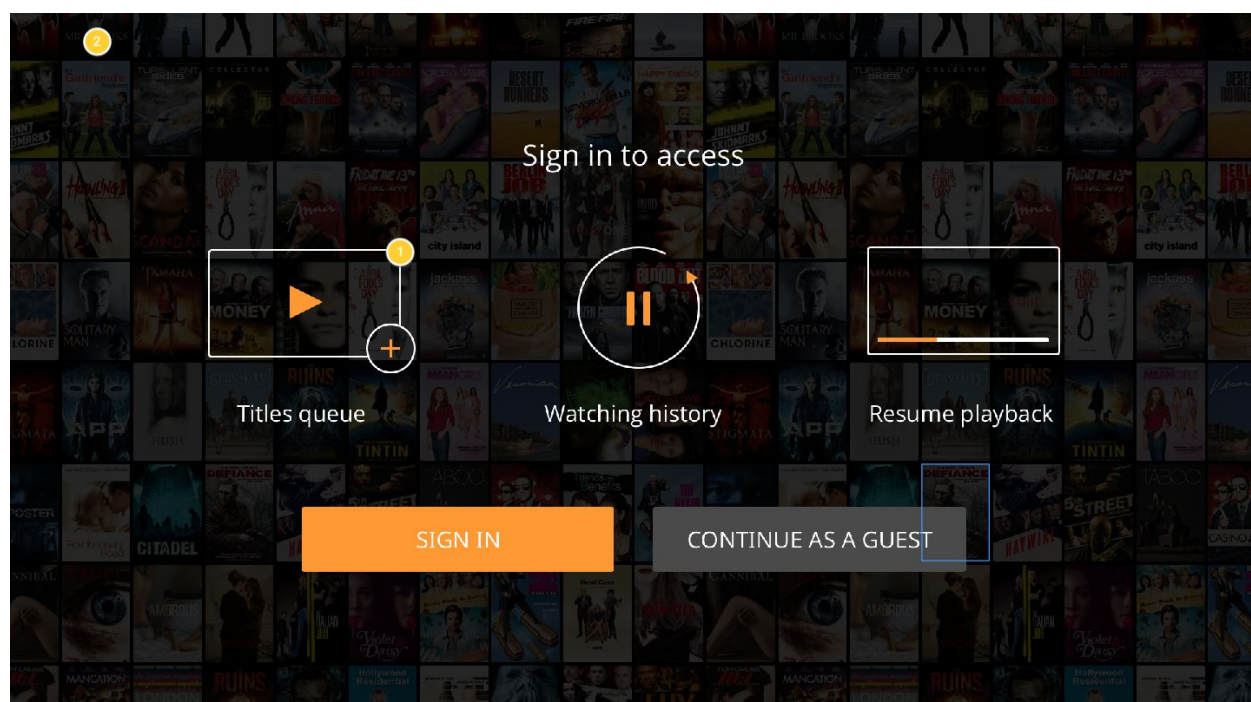

When the user clicks on all episodes, they are brought here

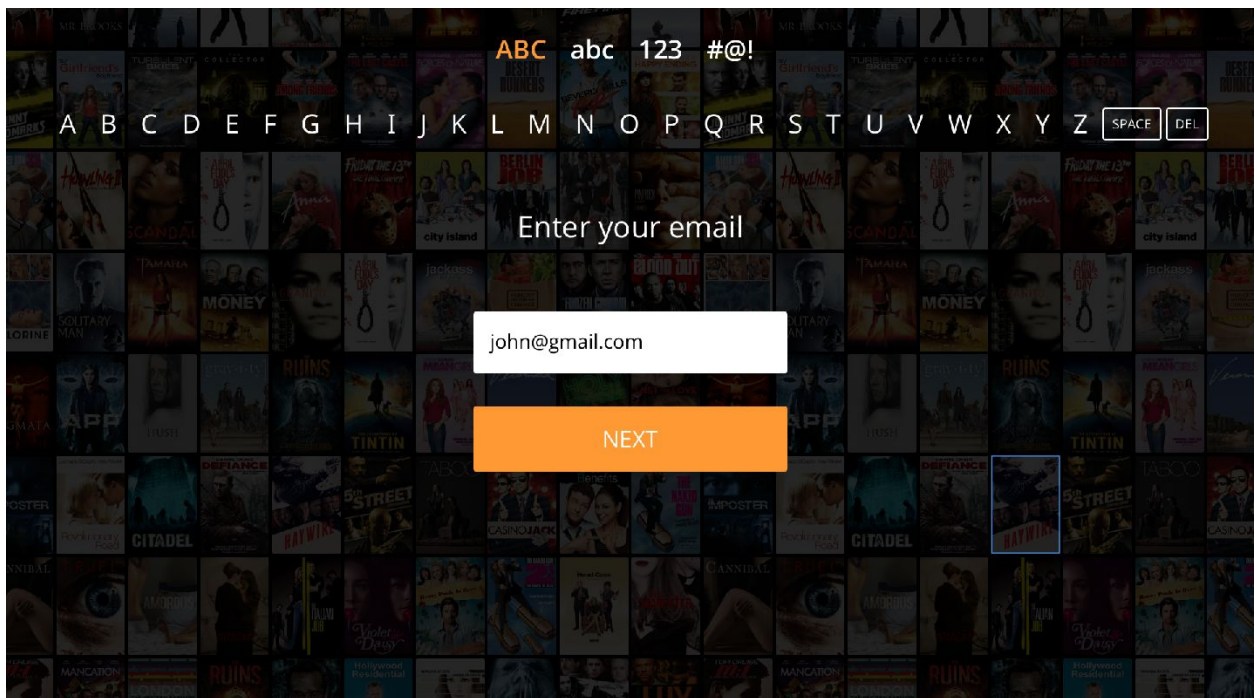

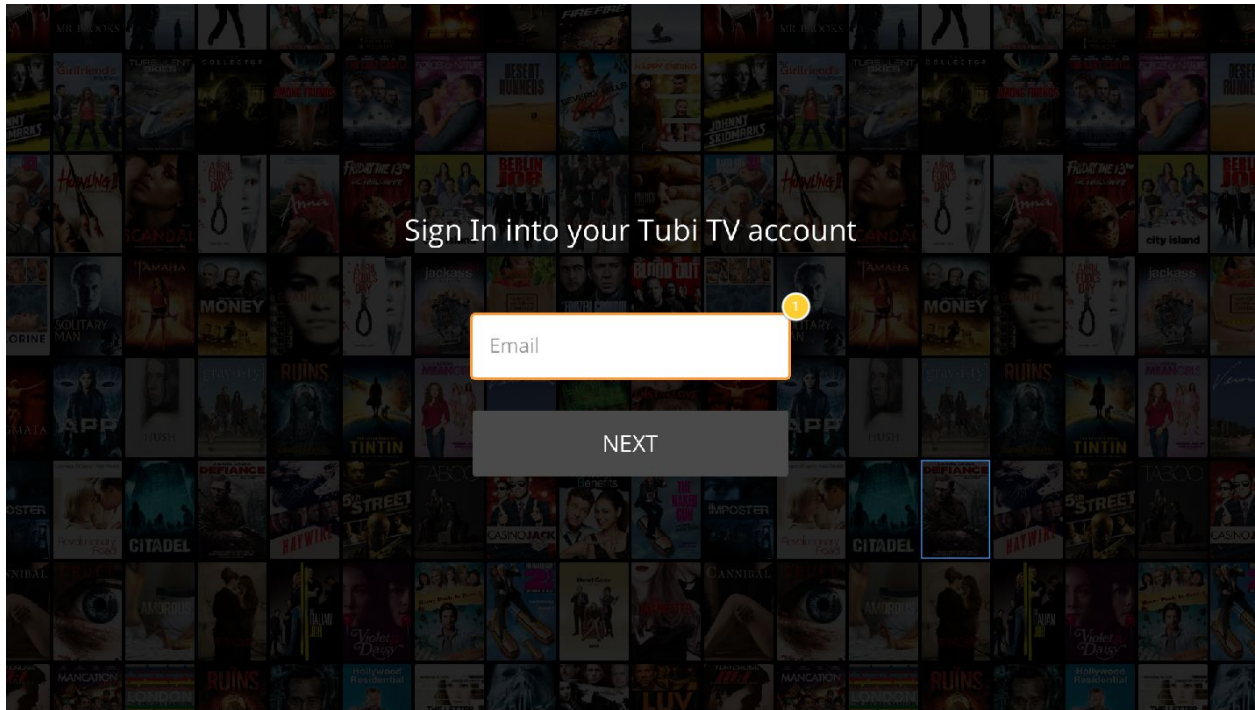

Sign-in

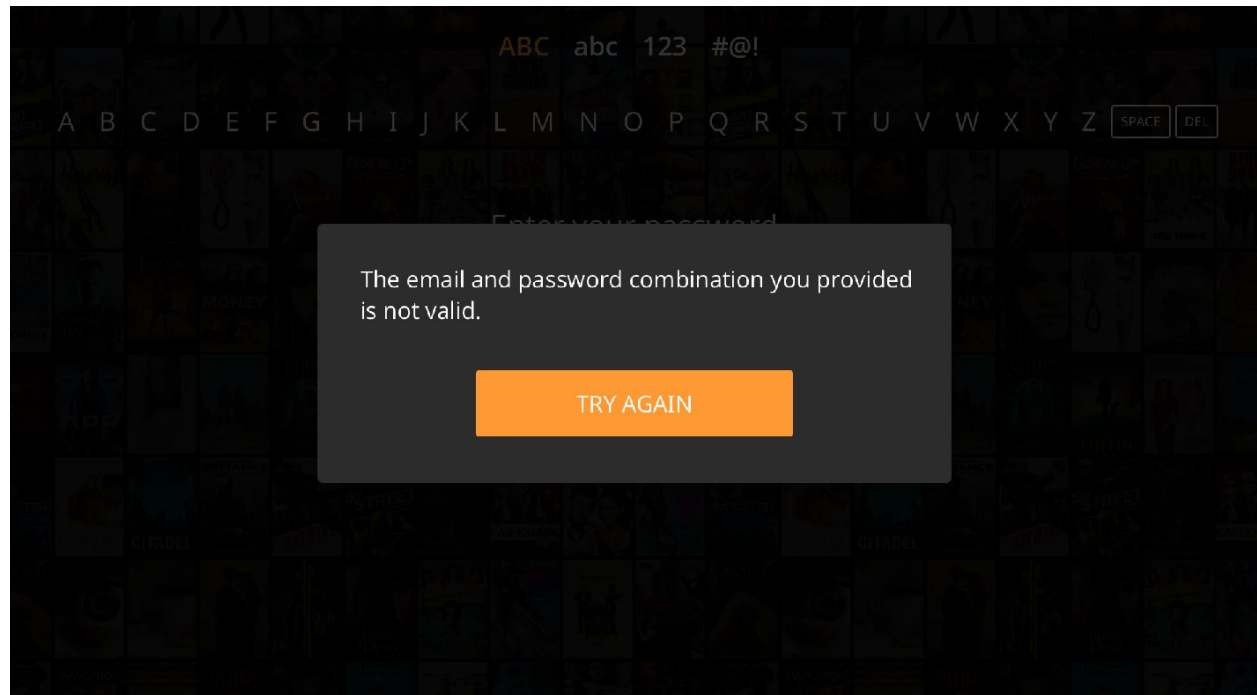

Attaching the screens since they are not in the PDF. The flow has one additional screen than the current experience and we are doing away with the SMS signup.
